

ColumbiaSoft introduces Document Locator version 6.4 with enhancements for Windows 8 and expanded search capabilities

New “My DL” offers convenient place to search files globally across the document management system, view messages and tasks, and run reports.

Portland, Ore. – April 30, 2013 – ColumbiaSoft released a major update today to its document management software used by businesses worldwide – Document Locator version 6.4 includes updates leveraging the latest Microsoft technologies, and a new feature called My DL.

“Engineering easy-to-use document management software that takes full advantage of all the current applications and systems from Microsoft is our primary objective,” said ColumbiaSoft engineering manager, Tim Emerson. “With Microsoft ending its support of Windows XP in April 2014, a major shift in the technologies used by businesses is occurring now. Document Locator is ready for companies upgrading to Windows 8 and we’re already laying the groundwork for Windows Blue.”

In addition to Windows 8, the new version of Document Locator also supports several other recent Microsoft updates, including Microsoft Office 2013, Windows Server 2012, and Internet Explorer 10.

However, chief among the highlights of this latest release is a new component called My DL. It offers a single location where users can go to search documents globally across multiple repositories. This enables faster decision-making based on access to information that may be related, but stored across different areas of business. Users can also view messages, respond to workflow tasks, and run reports from within My DL.

Also included in the release is an update to the DL Mobile interface that adds advanced searching options for users on mobile phones and tablets, and the addition of several new configuration options for the system’s built-in document workflow.

Upgrades for the software are available now. Customers on a support agreement with ColumbiaSoft receive all updates to the Document Locator software at no additional cost.
